The following news and comment from The American Legion Magazine is reprinted with commendations of the Association. We recommend it for serious study as to why war might possibly still exist on the Korean Peninsula after 58 years as well as in numerous other areas of the world. I am preparing a serious paper on this subject and appreciate the American Legions inspiration of the topic and title.

Sick Joke

In the latest example of the United Nations' crippling case of moral confusion, North Korea held the presidency of the U.N. Conference on Disarmament earlier this year. This is the same North Korea that has been caught shipping illicit weaponry overseas, testing long-range missilery and detonating nukes—all in violation of U.N. resolutions. As The Wall Street Journal reports, "The jokes are flying all around the world over this."

Joining North Korea on the disarmament panel are China, Pakistan and Iran. China, it pays to recall, has single-handedly restarted the arms race in space. Pakistan helped North Korea and Iran with their outlaw nuclear programs. And Iran is enriching uranium, building underground missile silos and racing to join the nuclear weapons club.
